SHOCK AND AWE

We have lift off!

The big daddy of cranes shows off its strength

 German global engineering giant Liebherr did some serious showing off recently as their LR13000 crawler crane lifted a LR11350, a LR1350/1 and a LTR1100 — 1430 tonnes — and a tiny little toy crane at the end. It then turned and moved sideways. The 13000 is used to shift the heaviest loads in the world, such as parts for nuclear power stations, oil platforms and Kim Kardashian's make-up bag.

Aircraft wait

in giant desert graveyard

Just outside Tucson, Arizona, stand massed ranks of the US military's bombers, freighters and cargo planes over 10 sprawling square kilometres — 4200 different aircraft all united by one factor: they're rooted. Planes in the Boneyard, as it's called, are stripped for parts or repaired. The low humidity and rainfall of the area — plus tough desert subsoil — make the location ideal.

Before Nikki Spehar joined the cast of My Kitchen Rules as one of the resident villains — and the show's clear-cut hottie — she was an aspiring model who starred in killer shoots like the one you see on these pages.

Her resume includes catwalk work for beauty giant L'Oreal, plus shoots for fashion mags and a hair expo. Nikki doesn't just have the looks for it, either — she's also got the attitude, as she proved when she said, "If there's a camera pointed at me I'll pose and pout."

But it'd be a mistake to think her hotness was the only thing that got her a gig on MKR.

Nikki's been working part-time as a butcher in her granddad's shop in North Sydney, which is good news for a few reasons: she knows the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, can tell the difference between a good steak and a cut that'd be tougher than shoe leather, and she sure as hell isn't a vegetarian.

ZOO has only seen Nikki and her teammate Katie Brooke have one go at cooking on the show, and they didn't score highly with the judges. But we reckon all that will change if they play to their strengths, ditch the greens and serve ZOO's favourite meat cuts: strip and inside skirt.

Trucking UNBELIEVABLE!

Super Trucks finally hit Oz and the results are beyond awesome

Prior to this year, if you saw a vehicle flying through the air at the Clipsal 500 in Adelaide, it meant that a V8 Supercars driver had made a horrible, horrible mistake.

Not anymore.

The Stadium Super Trucks series made its Aussie debut at the event, and any petrolhead who says they weren't nailed to their seat by the sight of 600-horsepower trucks hitting jumps and sailing 20 feet off the ground is a bigger liar than any politician in Canberra.

Super Trucks have been running in the US since 2013, and they're basically life-size versions of radio-controlled vehicles made by TRAXXAS. They go as hard as their little brothers, too; their top speed is about 210kmh, and when they hit a ramp at full clip they can get air for hundreds of feet down the racetrack. Plus they often corner on just three of their wheels.

The action at Clipsal was clinically insane, especially on the final lap of race three, when Sheldon Creed came off a ramp slightly askew, rolled his vehicle and actually crossed the finish line on his roof!

If you missed them the other weekend, use our Viewa app to see the action. You won't be sorry.

Oz's FUNNIEST MAN is back, dirtier than ever!

Potty-mouthed stand-up JIM JEFFERIES is returning to shock & awe us

How are things in Los Angeles, Jim?

It's pretty nice here. I'm just about to drive to Arizona 'cos I've got a gig in a new casino there.

What, you don't fly?

I'm sick of flying. I've got a brand-new Maserati, I'd rather drive it out through the desert. I'm on planes all the time so if I can drive to a place I'd rather do that.

Speaking of flying, we saw on Twitter you had a recent run-in with a US airline that lost your bag when you were touring Canada...

They lost my fking bags and it was 25 degrees below. All I had with me was a hoodie and

I was stuck in the hotel room. They said, "We can't get you your bags until tomorrow." But as soon as I bitched and moaned to 180,000 people on Twitter, all of a sudden they

John Goodman lives up the road. Bob Barker from The Price Is Right lives in my street — all the big stars [laughs]. I've seen John Goodman once when I was walking my kid found a way to get me my bags in an hour. I kept on ringing and nothing would happen. Start calling them a bunch of cts on Twitter and suddenly people sort you out.

"I THOUGHT FAME WOULD BE PUSSY, PARTIES AND FAST CARS"

Do you live in a cool part of Los Angeles?

I live in Mt Olympus, which is on top of West Hollywood, just where Laurel Canyon meets Sunset Boulevard.

Got any famous neighbours?

around the block and said hello but mostly I meet famous people down at the Improv. I did a gig down there recently and Paul McCartney was in the audience.

Did he laugh at your stuff?

He did. I went up and talked to him afterwards. Judd Apatow was there performing too and I noticed he got really nervous to meet him so I thought, if he's allowed to be nervous, I'm allowed to be nervous.

So if we come to LA to have a beer with you, where would you take us?

It depends on whether you want to pick up or not. I've got a kid now so I do all my drinking on the road. I'm away three weekends a month so three weekends a month I'm in different towns getting drunk and then when I'm in LA, I never go out. If I do, I go to a comedy club, so I could tell you which comedy club to go to, but I wouldn't have the foggiest how to get into one of the nightclubs.

Given your accent, were you surprised when you first went overseas that people 1) understood you and 2) found you funny?

It still takes me by surprise. I'm arguably the only touring stand-up Australian comic in America. There's Tim Minchin, as well, and then there's Barry Humphries, who's dressed as a woman...

At first I think they came to see me because of the accent — they thought it was adorable to watch a man say “ct” and not get in trouble.

If you could do a routine in front of either Tony Abbott, the Queen or Pope Francis, which person would you choose and why?

The Pope, every time. I've done shows in front of royalty and it doesn't do anything for me. Prince William was in the audience at a university gig. The Pope could probably do with a laugh. I also pick on religion a lot, but then again, how much English does he really understand?

What's your fave slang term?

It isn't really even a slang word, but I say “g'day” a lot here and I never would have said it in Australia. When I moved to England I started saying it. And I call everyone here “mate”... they find that hilarious. They also find it hilarious if you say “me” instead of “my”, as in, “I got me bag.” They think that's hysterical. I don't know why.

Who would star as you in the movie version of your US TV show, Legit?

If they make a movie of Legit I'll be starring in it. I'm trying to write a script at the moment.

“I TOOK A DISABLED FRIEND TO A BROTHEL”

All the stories in Legit were taken from your life in some way. When did you take a disabled bloke to a brothel to get a root?

In 2009, at The Daily Planet in Melbourne. We did it at lunchtime while I was at the Melbourne Comedy Festival. He was a friend of mine, let's put it that way.

Did it go well?

It did. He got his dick sucked and he didn't die — how much better does it need to go?

Get any good heckles these days or are most rubbish?

Ninety-nine percent of them are rubbish. I can't think of a real good one. A good heckle is one where the comedian laughs a bit and goes, “Ah, that was pretty funny.” Whereas people seem to think there's this mystique of the heckle where it's gotta be one that really hurts the comic, or beats them in some way. That never really works because even if you beat the comic, he's going to beat you down 10 times harder afterwards.

How good is it to get back in front of Aussie audiences?

I enjoy my Australian tours more than any I do. I feel there isn't this backlash against me I get in other countries. I used to have this feeling that Australia was ashamed of me, that I was this kid overseas telling dirty jokes who they rolled their eyes at — but in the last three years I feel Australia is sorta proud of me, and I like that. There may even be young comics now being influenced by what I do rather than just old bitter comics who think I'm that piece of shit who went overseas.

Sounds like life's good...

I got a Maserati and a little kid and I live down the road from John Goodman, although I don't think that means your life is really that great. I still suffer from depression a lot but I don't worry as much as I used to. There's something about success — I always thought it was going to be more enjoyable than it is. I thought that you'd just be surrounded by pussy and driving fast cars and partying all the time, but if you party all the time you just have hangovers every day, and if you're not getting wasted at these parties then WHAT THE FK ARE YOU DOING THERE? “Your life must be a party,” people say to me. Well, who wants to have a life that's a party and stacked with hangovers? I want a life that's like visiting a park every day. “Oh, that was nice.” I'd like a life that looks like a serene meadow, ya know?

Inside the secret world of SEX PARTIES!

Chris Reynolds Gordon (below) runs the UK's hottest bonk biz, Heaven's Circle. He tells ZOO about the best parties you've never been to...

THE IDEA

"I used to go to so-called 'elite parties' — sort of upmarket sex events — with an ex-girlfriend. I enjoyed them, but I looked around at the older, overweight people and thought, 'I can do better than this.' We started small, got a crowd of good-looking people involved, then it got bigger. The first threesome I had was with a female yoga instructor while I was with another girl. We'd had this threesome and she was getting changed as she had a yoga class. Me and this girl were having sex while talking to her. It was amazing. We only host our parties in beautiful, multimillion-pound houses. A few celebrities started coming and there was an article in a national magazine. Now it's booming."

THE PARTIES

"We have different kinds of parties. We have a traditional sex party, which is couples and single girls. We don't have single blokes at those as they tend to lurk and it can be quite awkward. Our crowd are all normal people — doctors, nurses, teachers. Never weirdos. Secondly, there's the single-guy-friendly parties for which we pick the hottest girls vs the hottest single guys. And there are always more guys than girls for those."

THE SEX

"It's a blast. Someone left one of our gatherings and said, 'It was like going to the Victoria's Secret after-party, only everyone was going wild and having sex.' People dress up like they're going to a top club in London. Later on, they get changed into sexy lingerie, maybe people dance, which leads to playing or watching. Then sex. Sex everywhere. It's very relaxed. You're in a stunning location, so people don't care whether they fk in front of people, and then that snowballs. I don't care about the naked blokes, as long as I'm looking at amazing naked women. It becomes normal, your sense of reality is out of whack. You'll be going home, buying petrol, and thinking an hour earlier I could've gone up to a girl and said, 'Hi, do you want to go and fk?'"

THE SECRET SOCIETY

"Couples fly in from Paris, New York, Germany, all over. Heaven's Circle brings all these kinky people together. The girls are smoking: fitness models. You might see your pin-up model from ZOO! Guys have a strange mentality where they think the hotter the girl, the less she'll be into sex because she's untouchable. I know girls who are average who say, 'No sex on the first date.' And I know cover girls who absolutely love sex any time, anywhere."

THE RULES

"Honestly, it's not for everyone. If your relationship isn't stable it can break it. It should be seen as the sugar on top, not the whole thing — and if you live off sugar it doesn't work! Remember, if you cheat in a relationship, it's never the same again. You never know what your girlfriend likes until you ask. There are couples for whom cheating is having sex with someone else without their partner watching. If you want that kind of relationship you need give and take, but most of all, you need honesty. It's about rules."

Household uses for SEX TOYS

ZOO proves that marital aids are more versatile than a double-jointed porn star

CREATIVE FLESHLIGHT USES

1 STUBBIE HOLDER

Slip one in so it's not ruined from lack of use — a beer, that is! The Fleshlight inner sleeve makes the perfect emergency protection for your beer as the hot sun beats off, er... beats down.

2 CHEF'S ARM PROTECTOR

You're cooking the buggery out of some chops or half a pig's worth of bacon in your trusty frying pan and what should happen but some bastard clot of fat does the great escape from the cooking area and splashes all over your arm. But not if you holster that pan!

3 WORKOUT TOOL

The Fleshlight doesn't just exercise your love muscle — you can use it as a tension tool to practise tricep extensions, kettlebell swings and chest flys. Wrap it around something apart from your pork sword and you'll see the results within weeks.

X-RATED MACGYVER!

NIPPLE CLAMP LANYARD

Stuck for a way to keep those precious VIP tickets visible? Clean the blood and hair off those nipple clamps and place them either side to hold the item in place. You'll be the talk of the backstage.

DILDO RSI RELIEVER

If you're fond of bashing one out on the keyboard then you'll either end up with a messy keyboard or a fked-up wrist. Repetitive Strain Injury (RSI) isn't just for chronic wankers — it can affect anyone who types with their wrists incorrectly oriented at the keyboard. But wresting them on a big, fat, long dildo will help protect from RSI. HR may disagree...

RIFLE PROTECTOR

As recently as 1990's Operation Desert Storm, US soldiers were putting a condom over the barrel of their gun to stop moisture and sand entering — a habit that started way back in World War Two. Over 2000 penis ponchos were sent to US forces in Kuwait, and a lot of them didn't get used for sex.

CARPOOL-LANE DECOY

Rush-hour traffic is busier than the pokies on pension day, and authorities have long pushed for carpooling in transit lanes; a less crowded route for drivers with passengers. So if you don't want to be stuck in traffic for hours but you also don't have any mates, the solution is simple: just blow up a sex doll — ZOO advises that you add clothes, a wig and a hat — and plonk it next to you. #Winning!

THE BUTT PLUG WINE-STOPPER

Tired of drinking a mouthful of vinegary piss when you try a glass of Chateau de Pants that's been open for a few days? Plug up that opening tight with a sex toy wine-stopper: nothing gets in or out! Warning: wash very well first.

Mercedes' turbo V8 bush basher

The G500 4x4² is a military-grade weapon that'll scare the pants off Mother Nature

If you had to drive to hell and back, you'd want something like this Merc monster for the trip. While crossing Satan's nature strip isn't on its design brief, pretty much everything else is. Heading for the Geneva Motor Show, this $500k relative of the G63 6x6 debuts the twin-turbo 4L direct-injected V8, giving 25kW and 80Nm over the standard G500 model. The driver sits 788mm off the ground — higher than Cheech and Chong — and can hit a top of 210kmh on the road and 160kmh off-road. And while this beast is nimble enough on bitumen, out in the wilds is where it really shines. For all we know, it could climb Everest.

● A bloke is driving happily along in his car with his girlfriend when he's pulled over by the police. The cop approaches him and asks, "Have you been drinking, sir?"

"No. Why?" says the man. "Was I driving all over the road?"

"No," comes the reply, "you were driving splendidly. It was the ugly, fat chick in the passenger seat that made me suspicious."

"I can mimic a bird," the man says proudly.

"Ha!" scoffs the manager. "Every person at this circus can mimic a bird, even the slow stable boy. That's not anything we'd want here."

"Get stuffed, then," says the man as he flies out of the window.

JACQUES the RIPPER

ZOO's stand-up comedian heckles life every week

HOW TO GET STRANGERS TO PAY FOR YOUR BABY

If you've never heard of it, crowdfunding is a pretty cool concept and up until recently, one that was only really used by filmmakers. They put their movie idea online and if people like it they can transfer some cashola and help the vision come to life. If you cough up enough money sometimes they'll even put you in the film, so look out for me as Stormtrooper Number Six in Hand Solo's Adventures in Poo-Jabba's Palace, due for release next month. It's gay porn, but you can't see a thing out of those Stormtrooper helmets, so I didn't even get hard.

In a stroke of genius, though, a couple who'd been trying to fall pregnant for many years decided to crowdfund their IVF treatment, and they reached their monetary goal pretty quickly. IVF is around $40,000 per procedure. My mate and his wife went through the whole overpriced ordeal a few years back, and despite my best efforts to convince them of other options, they now have a son. My angle was yes, you could totally give a huge wad of cash to a doctor and maybe fall pregnant, oooooooh you could give that money to me, I book us a three-way flight to Colombia and we drink beers and do blow on a beach for 12 months and by the end of that all three of us will be pregnant. Obviously they went with option A, such queers they are.

IVF is super-expensive in anyone's linguistics, and if you're willing to spend that amount on having a child you're probably smart, focused and decent parenting material, or at the very least, better than a 16-year-old high school dropout and her drug dealer boyfriend, for example. But Mother Nature seems to green-light fertility in douchebags and unfortunately there's no "crowdfunding vasectomies for cockheads" website.

I think that's why so many people rallied to the cause of this couple: they seemed like a nice pairing, good people, kind-hearted and blah, blah, blah. Even I gave 'em a few dollars. Not enough to secure the role of godfather to the child, but just enough for my donation to stand out from the rest. It's a shame I won't get to see their faces when they receive $69 from some guy called "Uncle Touchy". I don't want to be a part of the child's life but if it grows up and somehow strikes it rich, Uncle Touchy better get some box seats at the Bledisloe and a brand-new hard drive to replace the one the cops just confiscated.

UNFORTUNATELY,
THERE'S NO
"CROWDFUNDING
VASECTOMIES
FOR DOUCHEBAGS"
WEBSITE

JACQUES' COCK IS ON tinder

ME: I'm one of the good guys.

HER: You can't call yourself a "good guy". It's up to other people to make that call.

ME: Ah yeah, kinda like The Good Guys electrical appliance franchise, they self-titled that shit but they're probably arseholes.

HER: Yes, exactly.

ME: If I make you cum will you give me a toaster?

HER: Huh? Where the hell did that come from?

ME: Bing Lee, I hope.

HER: You're quite cute, but the 'tache is a little ewwww. Do you still have it?

ME: Did you just neg me?

HER: What's a neg?

ME: It's when you give someone a backhanded compliment to manipulate their attraction to you.

HER: Ah, I see. Sorry, you neg me back so we're even.

ME: The 'tache stays, arsehole. Deal with it.

SPORT'S MOST NOTORIOUS DRUG BUSTS

As a cocaine scandal tears the NRL a new one, ZOO looks at athletes who've been on the losing side in the war on drugs

DANNY WICKS

THE NRL'S DARK KNIGHT

Despite the fact he was on about $250,000 a year with the Newcastle Knights, the hulking forward decided to make a bit extra on the side by dealing drugs — and paid a high price. In 2010 he was jailed for three years for trafficking more than 20 grams of meth, and selling 150 ecstasy tablets to former teammate Chris Houston. Wicks ended up making $55 a week during his 18-month stay at Glen Innes Correctional Centre, where instead of following a high-protein diet laid out by the club nutritionist, he ate “absolute rubbish” so bad he spent most of his wage on fresh meat. “It’s shocking,” he said of the food. “I don’t know how some blokes survive on it.” But it could’ve been far worse for Wicks: each of his offences carried a max of 15 years’ imprisonment.

A SUPER BOWL RING AND 5KG OF COKE

In 2001 Jamal Lewis won the Super Bowl in his first NFL season. In '03 he almost broke the record for most yards by a running back in a season, and broke the record for most yards in a game. A few months later he conspired to possess and distribute 5kg of gak, and was jailed. That's got to be a record for going from the penthouse to the shithouse.

FAST & FURIOUSLY INTO NOSE CANDY

Spain's Juan Garriga had his best year in 1988, when he finished second in the 250cc world championship. And he had his worst year in 1998, when he was arrested for drug trafficking and illegal weapons after half a kilo of coke, guns and forged money were found in a raid on a bar.

SKATE LEGEND GOT 10 YEARS FOR METH

In the mid-to-late 1980s Christian Hosoi was one of the top vert skaters on the planet. When the sport fell off in the early '90s, he faced bankruptcy and got heavily into drugs, eventually getting busted in Hawaii in 2000 while trying to smuggle 0.68kg of crystal meth, and going inside for four years.

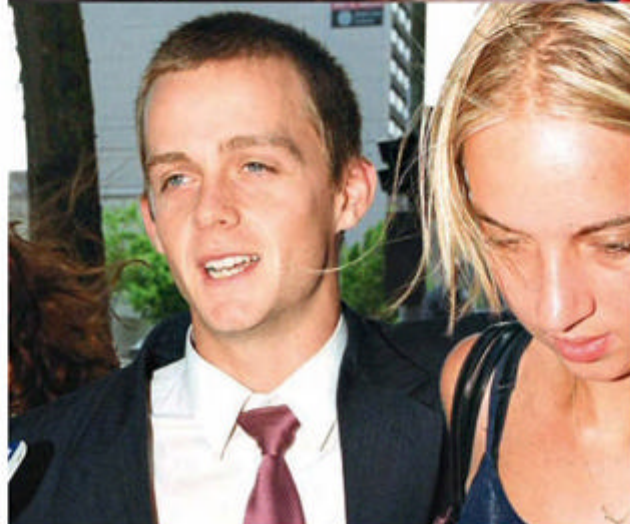

EVANGELOS GOUSSIS

FROM DRUG CRIM TO WORLD CHAMP TO HITMAN

If someone isn't writing a movie about this Melbourne crim's life, they bloody well should be. After arriving in Oz from the former USSR aged eight, Goussis showed lots of talent as a boxer, contending for a spot on the Aussie team for the 1988 Olympics. But he also fell in with a bad crowd while working as a nightclub bouncer, and in 1989 he got 18 months' jail for his role in heroin trafficking and a stabbing. Soon as he got out of prison, he began kickboxing and even took some pro boxing fights, and snagged the World Kickboxing Association middleweight title. Trouble was never far away, though: by 2001 he was working as hired muscle, and he's been convicted of two murders in the infamous Melbourne gangland wars: that of Lewis Caine, who was shot in the head in 2004, and Lewis Moran, also shot in the head that year. He's always claimed police misconduct led to his convictions.

BEN PAPPAS

OZ SKATING GENIUS AND DRUGS TRAGEDY

Melbourne-born Ben and his brother Tas turned the skateboarding world upside down with their insane skills, becoming number one and two in the world by 1996 and even beating Tony Hawk in competition. But they partied as hard as they rode, so much so that Tas has admitted he skated vert ramps while he was tripping on acid. In 1999 Ben was caught trying to smuggle 103 grams of cocaine from the States into Oz by hiding it in his shoe. That meant he couldn't return to the US, which basically dropped the bomb on his skating career. "I don't know what he was thinking," Tas later said. "We just partied a lot and it was just... a stupid choice. Basically our lifestyle had snowballed, and we went from one bum choice to the next." The ban from the US was part of a tragic downward spiral for Ben, who committed suicide in March 2007.

FLOYD MAYWEATHER'S COKE-SLAGIN' DAD

Floyd Mayweather Senior was a great boxer in his day, and taught Floyd Jr the tricks of the trade. He also got five years in the big house for drug trafficking from 1993, adding to the family's list of run-ins with the law, which is longer than the Hume Highway.

4KG OF MARIJUANA FOR PERSONAL USE?
YEAH, RIGHT!

Bam Morris is living proof that head collisions in the NFL damage your brain. How else to explain the fact that, just months after starring in the 1996 Super Bowl, the Pittsburgh Steelers running back was done lugging 4kg of weed and a gram of coke around Texas?

GRIDIRON DRUGGO TRIES TO HAVE JUDGE KILLED!

Most sportsmen who get done for drugs cop it sweet and go to jail. Not former NFL player Darryl Henley, who was charged with trafficking cocaine and thought it'd be a good idea to hire hitmen to kill the judge and a witness at his trial. Whoops. That got him 41 years' jail.

NATHAN BAGGALEY
WALTER WHITE WITH AN OLYMPIC SILVER

After winning two silver medals at the 2004 Olympics, Baggageley was deservedly named the Australian Institute of Sport's Athlete of the Year. But just three years later police found him in possession of 762 ecstasy pills, and two years after that he pleaded guilty to making more than 1500 MDMA tablets and ended up in jail. It was a meteoric fall for the former triple world champ, but more was to come. In 2013 he was caught up in a Federal Police operation that resulted in Nathan being charged with making a marketable amount of methamphetamines in his role as part of a syndicate that set up two drug labs. He pleaded guilty to the charges and is currently waiting to be sentenced in the NSW District Court.

LES MARA

RUGBY LEAGUE'S DRUG KINGPIN

The former five-eighth for Souths and Balmain never reached the pinnacle of rugby league during the late '70s to early '80s, but when it came to drug smuggling, he was playing at a representative level. Police said Mara was a key figure in a scheme that imported a whopping 10kg of coke into Oz, with plans to wangle another 20kg past Customs. When he knew the cops were onto him, Mara managed to evade them for 18 months, bolting to Rio de Janeiro and Ireland before finally getting busted on the NSW South Coast in November 2006. But that's not all: in 2005 the Sydney Morning Herald revealed that he'd also been mixed up in "money laundering, robbery at Sydney wharves" and "bringing in 34 kilograms of ecstasy from Malaysia". The judiciary handed him a 20-year suspension from society.

$100 MILLION WORTH OF STEROIDS!

Scottish 400m runner David Jenkins won silver at the 1972 Olympics, but he got a gold medal in the illegal manufacture of steroids. He and a mate set up a factory to make anabolic 'roids for sale in the US and got seven years in the slammer for moving gear worth $100 million.

BIG MAN, BIG BAGS OF WEED

NFL legend Nate Newton won three Super Bowls and played at about 175kg. Coincidentally, that's almost exactly the total amount of marijuana he was busted with on two separate occasions just five weeks apart in 2001. Not the sharpest tool in the shed, old Nate.

ON THE FAST TRACK TO JAIL

Tim Montgomery was the fastest man on Earth until his records were overturned due to steroid abuse. He was caught up in a huge 'roids scandal in America, and capped it off by getting done for dealing smack in 2008. At least he could outrun any rapist in the jail he went to.

SPORT'S MOST NOTORIOUS DRUG BUSTS

PAUL HAYWARD 30 YEARS FOR 8.4KG OF SMACK

The rugby league world went into shock in October 1978 when Paul Hayward, the Newtown Jets' first-grade halfback, was busted in a Bangkok hotel with a suitcase containing enough smack to kill Keith Richards 11 times over. He was caught up in a scheme that involved his brother-in-law, notorious Sydney crim Neddy Smith, and while he signed a confession, he later said he only did so because he was threatened with life in jail or execution. Hayward got 30 years, which is a stretch not many could survive in Thailand's notorious Klong Prem Prison — a hotbed of violence, disease and drug addiction. Hayward became known as one of the toughest men in the joint, but contracted HIV during his sentence. A royal pardon saw him released in 1989, but he struggled with life on the outside, often having jail flashbacks, and died in 1992.

SCOTT MILLER SERIAL METH OFFENDER

In the late 1990s, a lot of Aussie blokes wanted to be Scott Miller. He'd become a world champion swimmer with an Olympic silver and bronze to his name, had a rep as a bit of a man's man, and did so well with the ladies that he married stunning TV star Charlotte Dawson. But he ran into trouble with the swimming authorities in 1998, then had bigger trouble with the cops in 2009, when he was given community service for supplying ecstasy and receiving stolen property. In 2013 he was busted with the drug ice two times in the space of two months — and the second time he also had $16,000 in cash and a set of scales on him. He pleaded guilty to possession and avoided jail again, but the magistrate warned: "Mr Miller, the police are going to be watching you like a hawk."

Superwog!

Oz's YouTube comedy kings have racked up millions of hits. Now they're taking their show on the road...

H

owdy, boys. Since ZOO's interviewer is a Skippy, he has to ask: will you be offended if he uses the word "wog" during this interview?

Theo: [Laughs] Nah, not at all!

Superwog's a comedy phenomenon. But how did it all kick off?

Theo: We've always liked impersonating people since we were young. We used to have a crappy little camera and make videos well before our first YouTube video. We'd just impersonate our parents fighting, our extended family all had weird ways of talking...

Nathan: We used to do that on weekends and weeknights, to make us and our friends laugh.

How'd you go from that to putting it up on YouTube?

Theo: Seeing all the shows that were out, like Fat Pizza, Summer Heights High, Borat, all these artists made shows with impersonations. We wanted to go beyond that so we created this world of Superwog, with his mates and his delusion and all that. "We'll just make it with our shitty little camera, put it up and try to impress our friends." We wanted to get 500 views.

Who came up with the name Superwog?

Theo: I liked Superwog because it encompassed all wogs [laughs]. It was like the ultimate wog.

Like 50 Shades of Wog?

Nathan: [Laughs] Yeah!

The characters you do, especially the psycho dad, where does the inspiration come from?

Nathan: My dad.

He's like that [laughs].

Theo: Very dramatic, and he loses it over little things, weird things. You can't correct him in public... he'd lose his shit.

Nathan: Or if you put a glass on the edge of a table, he'll lose it. You have to put it in the middle so it won't fall. He's erratic and volatile... we still laugh at that.

Theo, the guy you play who's always yelling shit at chicks out the car window, what's the go there?

Theo: [Laughs] That's every wog tradie I've seen! They operate with different rules and that's what I love about them. It's like [does the voice] "Bro, nothin' fkin' matters, bro!" Fk the rules, they don't care. I come from a corporate background but I did a week on a construction site and I got exposed to all of that.

"I look like a full tranny in a chick's wig. Theo enjoys playing the female!"

Nathan: I used to do labouring. I saw both sides interact. One guy would want to do it straight and the wog guy would be, "Fk that!" I was laughing my arse off. Me and Theo would talk about it for hours.

What about the Skippy characters? How'd you sketch them?

Theo: From school. We went to school with a lot of Aussies, like white Aussies. We were mates with them, but it was very funny for us to notice the difference.

Nathan: I'd sleep over at their house and be fascinated. The way they have dinner — it's on time, everyone comes together, it's beautiful and straightforward. I'm used to my dad with his leg up with an open chicken.

Theo: With his butt crack out, farting non-stop.

Nathan: Even the toilet, that was a big deal in someone else's house. Going to the toilet is a big thing for wogs, it's not small. A wog in an Aussie's house would be sweating and waiting, going, "Is it clean?" ... Aussies would be shocked at the smell we would produce.

The Skippy people do come out looking pretty good in the videos — they just get on with shit, go by the book, but the wogs...

Nathan: Because it's all about ego, wanting to be the best, and to get there, we'll do anything. We'll take supplements, steroids, just to lift that bit more than everyone else.

Do you think the videos are a success because they're honest, there's no filter?

Theo: Yeah, I feel that, man. When we went to school I got on good with Aussies and FOBs [Fresh Off Boats, aka Maoris and Islanders]. It's all about who you're comfortable chilling with ... Aussies were into beers and surfing. I don't drink beer. I just wanted to chill at home and play video games. It felt like there were clans.

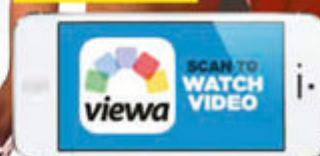

How did you decide which one of you would dress up as a chick?

Theo: Have you seen him with a wig? It's fking horrific.

Nathan: [Laughs] I look like a full tranny ... Theo enjoys playing the female!

You've had one smash hit live tour around Australia, and now another's on the way soon. How much of it is new stuff?

Theo: It's all brand-new, all fresh stuff. But the characters are the same.

If you could get anyone to play a wog and an Aussie in your show, who would you pick?

Nathan: I'd have to say Eric Bana.

Theo: He was a big inspiration, he could play a wog and an Aussie. Like Poida in Fast Forward. That was off the hook!

Nathan: My dad, maybe [laughs].

Theo: That would be better than acting. There'd be no script!

See Superwog's Talk Shit, Get Hit show live!

The boys play Melbourne Town Hall as part of the Melbourne International Comedy Festival on March 27, 28 and 29, and Sydney's Enmore theatre on May 16 and 17. To get more tour dates as they become available, keep checking with Ticketek and Ticketmaster.

LIBBY POWELL RETURNS

IT'S BEEN SIX MONTHS SINCE WE BROUGHT
YOU THE BUSTIEST BABE ON THE GOLD COAST.
AND FOR THAT WE'RE VERY, VERY SORRY...

Libby, it's been too long.
Far too long. What've
you been up to since you were last in ZOO?

I've been to Vegas again — twice! The first time I went over for the Las Vegas
International Model Search.
I didn't win...

WHAT!?

... but it was a good experience, something different, because I've never done a modelling show that big before. It was pretty full-on and the rehearsals were crazy.
There were 50 girls from around the world, and there were two other Aussies

besides me. One was another
ZOO girl, Ashleigh Munro.

Was it like Miss Universe with all the costume changes and stupid questions from the judges?

There were three rounds,
yeah. We had to do a dance routine, there was a formal round, then a bikini round as well.

Blokes always imagine there are nude fights going on in the change rooms at beauty pageants. Can you confirm that?

[Laughs] No, all the girls were lovely.

And the next time you went to Vegas — did you cut sick in the casinos and smash it in the clubs?

I just went over to have fun! I'm not a gambler, but I've got to learn — maybe next time. But the clubs there are amazing, they're crazy. You come back to Australia — and I don't go out much here — but it doesn't compare.

They've got the world's best DJs and thousands of people between what I do and going to the beach.

Except you're not surrounded by blokes skolling beer at the beach.

[Laughs] True! At first I was freaking out because some girls said some of the guys are horrible, but it's not bad at all. I've worked in nightclubs so I know what it's about, and I prefer the pub to the nightclub because everyone is friendlier.

You must meet some

“MY ARMS STILL

ENOUGH TO TAKE A

on the dance floor.

Roughly how many free drinks were you offered over there? More than 50?

[Laughs] Yeah — in a night!

More proof that Yanks have great taste in women. We hear you're working in Western Australia...

I am, in different pubs near the mines in Kalgoorlie.

Ah, you're one of those barmaids who don't wear street clothes to work.

We're called skimpies, yeah. There are topless skimpies but I don't do that; I'm in a bikini. Some people are like, “Oh my God!” but I look at it like there's no difference characters...

Definitely! All the guys are so different. You do get the odd one who sits at the bar and talks to himself — there are a few crazy guys who sit there laughing at themselves. The first time I met this one guy I thought he was talking to me in a pretty loud voice, but no, he was having a conversation with himself!

You must get enough tips to out-earn Bill Gates.

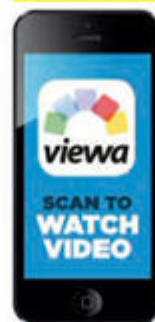

[Laughs] Well, the most I've made in

And I actually sold one of my ZOO magazines for $500! [Laughs] I just sold it to this guy after I signed it — that's all I did!

Libby, we checked and you have 353,000 Instagram followers. Jesus Christ has an account and you're catching him rapidly. So now you can officially say you're almost as popular as Jesus.

[Laughs] No way!

How'd you react when your numbers started getting crazy?

I'm still really shocked, I don't understand why it's happened.

We can think of a few reasons.

When I meet people they say I'm famous, but I say I'm a normal person, there's nothing special about me...

We beg to differ. There are a lot of full-frontal pics on your Insty. Is your bum starting to feel left out?

Yeah, I think it is! I get heaps of comments asking when I'm going to show my bum, but it's so hard to do. Last time I was in the mag you asked about the bum selfie, the belfie, and I said my arms weren't long enough to take one.

And now?

They haven't grown. I still don't have long enough arms!

You must get some hilarious and weird comments on Instagram.

I get a good laugh every day. Some of the things guys say, I don't know where they come up with it! There's one that gets used a lot: I would drag my balls through 10 miles of nails just to hear you fart through a walkie-talkie.

[Laughs] It's so dumb it's funny.

Sorry about that. We'd had a bit to drink that night...

F1 CARS of the future

The Australian Grand Prix kicks off this weekend. Here's what Daniel Ricciardo's son could be driving in 2036...

GET THE APP!

FERRARI'S CONCEPT

The Prancing Horse released images of its pipe dream car to provoke the governing body into relaxing a few rules. It's designed to look good, first and foremost, to get younger people who favour racing games over the real thing involved in Formula One. Mission accomplished — it's sexier than Miranda Kerr.

THE RED BULL X2010

Made for Gran Turismo by Adrian Newey, who designs the real F1 cars, it's what a Red Bull would look like if there were no rules to limit F1 cars' speed. It runs a fan to develop extreme downforce, would weigh just 545kg, and have a top speed of 500kmh. It's the limit of what a human body can withstand.

LOWER THAN A SNAKE'S BUM!

Virtual car designer Ludwin Cruz created this ultra-sleek future F1 effort, which looks more like a pod racer from Star Wars than a current racer. It's far smaller and tighter than what's competing today, with what looks like 23-inch wheels up front and cleverly disguised aero gear.

LAMBORGHINI'S RAGING BULL

It's not an official design, but it looks good enough to be. Like a fighter plane, it's got extra room for a co-pilot, with covered wheels like the Ferrari and Red Bull, and an all-black paint job that would rank as the best in F1 if it were real.

HONDA'S OUTRAGEOUS HOON-MOBILE

It's a Hot Wheels prototype, but it was created by the team at Honda, who decided to put a V10 engine in the back. And not just any V10, but a 20-litre monster of a thing! The last time V10s ran in F1 they were three litres and made up to 690kW, so God only knows how this'd go.

HOW TO SURVIVE THE ZOMBIE APOCALYPSE!

Killer tips on defeating the undead from academics and disease control pros

PLAN MULTIPLE ESCAPE ROUTES

In 2011 the US Center for Disease Control published an anti-zombie guide. In it they stressed not relying on just one way out of a heavily populated area. For instance, if you're trying to get from Melbourne to Uluru, don't just assume the Calder Freeway won't be choked with brain-eating freaks. Get ready to use the A8 highway to Adelaide, which will definitely be clear.

GET THE HELL OUT OF TOWN!

Researchers at the USA's Cornell University have just presented the findings of a detailed study titled The Statistical Mechanics of Zombies. They found that unlike what we see in movies, the plague of undead won't happen everywhere at once. Instead, it'll smash big cities, and take longer to get out to Woop Woop. How long? Using the US, they found that New York would be doomed straight away, but the Rocky Mountains would be OK for months. To put that in Aussie terms, Sydney's stuffed, but you could hole up in the Simpson Desert for a fair while.

SUPPLIES, SUPPLIES AND MORE SUPPLIES

Setting yourself up for life after the invasion of the brain eaters means stocking up on water, canned food, medication, tools, clothing and bedding, and first aid. A water sanitation kit would be ideal, as would weapons that can smash a zombie's head, like axes, sledgehammers or photos of Julie Bishop death-staring someone.

HELP OUR DIGGERS FIGHT

Students from Canada's Carleton University modelled a zombie attack for a 2009 academic paper. They found that humanity's best chance of surviving an attack was using "extremely aggressive" tactics very quickly. They reckon trying to find a cure or quarantining healthy humans wouldn't work, but we could win if we "hit hard and hit often". That's the armed forces' job, but civilians could assist by helping to supply the soldiers, treating the wounded and knocking off any stray undead.

TRUMP CARD

Bella! Miss Universe Italy 2014 Valentina Bonariva struts her stuff in a hot pink bikini at the 2015 global pageant, held at Trump National Doral in Florida, US.

DAY OF OUR LIVES

Twenty-year-old Londoner Abigail Day can make an arse of herself anytime she wants — the results speak for themselves. Give her a big hand!

POLE POSITION

Modelling is a side-gig for UK hottie Holly Gibbons — her main job is as a pole fitness instructor. We were going attend a class, but sadly she doesn't accept tipping dollars.

ZOMBIE ARMY TRILOGY

PS4, XB1, PC

8/10

THE GIST: Pop quiz: what's more fun to shoot, zombies or Nazis? Why not both! Best played co-op with mates, Hitler's army is back from the dead and need to be put down with well-placed shots to the cranium. Classic war weapons like pistols, sniper rifles and grenades are at your disposal through three campaigns.

ZOO SAYS: Smooth gameplay is brain-dead fun for hours as eight different characters progress up the ranks. The X-ray, bullet cam and slow-mo shots are the best.

WIN! ZOMBIE ARMY TRILOGY

For your chance to win one of 10 copies of Zombie Army Trilogy on PS4 or Xbox One, simply go to our website at inthezoo.com.au for entry details.

ACTION

DMC DEVIL MAY CRY: DEFINITIVE EDITION

PS4, XB1

THE GIST: To hell and back, the third-person action game reboot features the younger, cooler Dante, who slices and blasts demons with drool-worthy combos. This remastered edition looks sharp and comes with all the pre-existing DLC, Vergil's Downfall campaign and several new combat modes.

ZOO SAYS: Smashing through hordes of demons with crunching combos is simply epic, and the active battlegrounds are jaw-dropping. The upgraded graphics are glorious, and come meshed with a killer story and appropriately hellish guitar tunes. If you somehow missed this kick-arse reboot last gen, don't make the same mistake twice.

SCI-FI

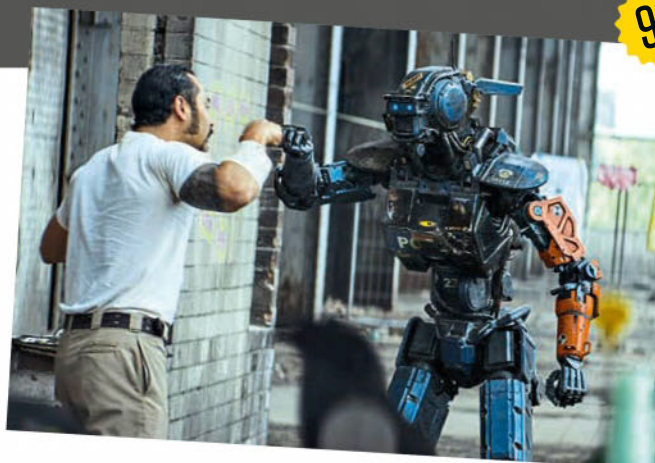

CHAPPIE

[MA15+]

THE GIST: A scientist (Dev Patel) creates a robot that can think and feel. Named Chappie (Sharlto Copley), the 'bot is raised by a couple of gangstas (Ninja and Yolandi from weirdo rave-rock group Die Antwoord). But Chappie and his friends must fight to survive against humans — led by a mulleted Hugh Jackman — who feel threatened by him.

ZOO SAYS: District 9 director

Neill Blomkamp is back to his genius best. Reuniting with his writer wife Terri Tatchell has given Chappie the heart, focus and structure Elysium slightly lacked. Casting Die Antwoord was a masterstroke, as it gives the film a cool urban edge. Action-packed, funny, sad — Chappie has it all and reaffirms Blomkamp as one of the best directors of our time. Bring on Alien 5!

9¹⁰

CRIME/DRAMA/
COMEDY

INHERENT VICE

[MA15+]

6¹⁰

THE GIST: The psychedelic '60s are coming to an end and everyone is paranoid. Stoner private eye Doc Sportello (Joaquin Phoenix) gets a visit from his hot ex, who tells him about her billionaire boyfriend whose wife is plotting to get him thrown into the nuthouse. Doc soon becomes involved in a bizarre and mysterious world. ZOO SAYS: Directed by PT Anderson (Boogie Nights), and also starring Josh Brolin, Benicio Del Toro and Owen Wilson, this is weird and hard to follow, but you can't help but enjoy the quirky acting, funny dialogue, trippy directing and cool soundtrack by Radiohead's Jonny Greenwood.

ROMANTIC
COMEDY

MANNY LEWIS

[CTC]

5¹⁰

THE GIST: Manny Lewis, (Carl Barron) is a popular comedian in his mid-forties. He's a bit of a lonely sad sack until he meets Maria (Leeanna Walsman) in a cafe and the two strike up an awkward relationship, despite not initially knowing they've already met on a sex hotline. Manny has to sort some shit out with his dad (Roy Billing) and himself before he can make a go of it with Maria. ZOO SAYS: We were pumped for this 'cos Barron is usually a funny bugger, but it's disappointingly short on jokes and, although sweet at times, the romance is formulaic and cliché. Sydney looks great, but.

SLEEPING WITH SIRENS

MADNESS

EMO

4/10

SOUNDS LIKE:

This US five-piece call themselves post-hardcore, but there's nothing hard about Kellin Quinn's high-pitched singing.

ZOO SAYS: The music is unoriginal but well-executed. Unless you like emos with sexy tats and fringes, come back when Quinn's balls drop.

CANCER BATS

SEARCHING FOR ZERO

HARDCORE

7/10

SOUNDS LIKE:

The Bats dabble in mellower feels on songs like No More Bull Shit, while their sludgy hardcore and doomy metal is stripped back to its most primal form.

ZOO SAYS: The Canadian five-piece are at their catchiest on their fifth album, but still pack a punch.

Just waiting for the next dole cheque

INDIE ROCK

BRITISH INDIA

NOTHING TOUCHES ME

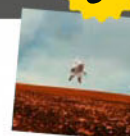

8/10

SOUNDS LIKE: It's hard to believe these Melbourne youngsters have already been a band for over a decade and are now releasing their fifth album. The years of touring and recording have paid off, as their sound has matured like a fine Jennifer Aniston. Second single Suddenly is the best example of this — it's everything Australia has come to love from the band: memorable guitar leads, sing-along choruses and Declan Melia's impassioned voice.

ZOO SAYS:

A rad mix of rock and more melodic moments, this effort will continue to grow British India's popularity in Australia and overseas.

WORLD MUSIC

XAVIER RUDD AND THE UNITED NATIONS

NANNA

7/10

SOUNDS LIKE: The Aussie singer/songwriter completes his transformation into full-blown hippie — you can almost smell the pong of BO, hear the pitter-patter of little hacky sacks and feel the warmth of a tree hug on his eighth album. Surrounded by The United Nations — musos from Indigenous Australia, South Africa, Samoa, Germany and Papua New Guinea — Rudd is complemented by keys, horns, flute and even saxophones.

ZOO SAYS: The cruisy acoustic style is no longer, but Rudd's knack for a good melody remains. More jam-based and free-flowing, it has a reggae vibe to it. If greenies make you see red, best give this a miss, as the lyrics are very "earthy".

BLU-RAY

COMEDY

LET'S BE COPS

[MA15+]

3/10

THE GIST: Two loser buddies — Ryan (Jake M. Johnson) and Justin (Damon Wayans Jr) — get mistaken for real cops when they go to a party dressed as the law. Loving the attention, they milk the joke for too long and get mixed up with dirty dicks (detectives) and the Mob. ZOO SAYS: Damon does the Wayans proud by continuing the family tradition of taking a funny idea and making it shit.

COMPUTER CARS!

You'll soon be able to plug your Apple or Android device into your car's dash. Next stop, the iCar

1 Dozens of car models are set to incorporate Android Auto and Apple's CarPlay system into their 2015 releases, which will run popular features on the car's dashboard

2 Ford has announced it will integrate CarPlay and Android Auto with its Sync 3 touch-screen infotainment system, and the first cars to pack the new tech should start appearing next year

3 The idea is to use voice commands to stop people texting — the apps will disable phones while in use — and not to Hoover up huge amounts of personal data and project adverts onto people's eyelids. Hi there, Google!

4 Android Auto offers navigations via Google

Maps, can read and reply to messages, and access Google Play or the phone's library for tunes. CarPlay uses Siri Hands Free for calls, checking messages, navigation and music. In-car features depend on the model

5 It's likely car firms will sign up to both, or risk missing out on rabid Apple or Android fans who support their OS like they're Holden or Ford fans. Toyota — in US models — and Porsche are the only big holdouts. But for how long?

6 There are risks, though. A study by the Texas Transportation Institute found using voice to send texts while driving was as dangerous as using the phone, as drivers were distracted from action on the road

+ There are still land areas and islands that have not been claimed by any nation — the largest being a 1.6-million-square-kilometre slice of Antarctica called Marie Byrd Land

+ The world's most powerful supercomputer would need to be 100,000 times faster to match the human brain

+ Women who like to drink beer are 60 per cent more likely to have sex on a first date

+ Some de-icing substances used to clean snow from roads in Moscow, Russia, are so toxic they will take 1.3 billion years to dissolve

+ If the Earth's seven billion people all jumped and landed at the same time, the planet would move one hundredth of the radius of a single hydrogen atom

+ If you're lucky enough to live in Massachusetts, US, you can make US$250 a week donating your poo to science

+ There's a museum in Yokohama, Japan, that exhibits nothing but cup noodles

Austrian Franz Muellner set a new record by holding up a 500kg ski jump while 120 snowboarders jumped over it
